NEWS

SPECIAL POINTS OF INTEREST:

 LISAA's membership year runs from September 1 to August 31. Renew now for 2001-2002! Membership forms are available in this newsletter, by contacting any Executive member, via e-mail (lisaa@ecn.ab.ca), and on the LISAA website at http://www.ecn.ab.ca/lisaa .

GREETINGS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Now that I'm in my second year as President of LISAA, I find I'm starting to run out of creative ideas for the President's Letters. However, inspiration comes in odd forms and this month is no exception! We recently had a LISAA executive meeting. At the end of the meeting, our executive member in charge of memberships very diplomatically asked me: "By the way Tracy, you realize you haven't renewed your membership yet, don't you?" Oops! A number of you will be getting similar notices this month – don't feel bad, but please do renew your memberships right away and I encourage you to take the opportunity to top up your manager, etc. I take pride in being the one who remembership fee with a donation to the scholarship fund or the special project fund.

However, let us go back to this problem of remembering to renew memberships. Most librarians I know belong to more than one library association. Most librarians I know are involved in organizations outside of the library world. Most of us have many things occupying our brains, of which dates to renew library association memberships is a very teeny, weenie, part. Some people do have this wonderful aptitude to remember such things; unfortunately, I'm not one of them. Big library organizations recognize this and devote resources to sending out reminders in advance of your membership expiring, as well as the reminders after the fact. I heard from "a friend" that CLA can send up to 5 notices. However, most of the smaller associations hope you will remember to renew and then resources only need to be spent to remind the people like me. I do feel bad about forgetting to renew my memberships because I know it takes an effort by someone to notify me, but more than that, my fragile ego is wounded. As a librarian, I like to think I'm organized, on the ball, a decent task minds others, not vice versa! When I was advised that I forgot my LISAA membership, my lofty views of myself came crashing down into a pile of psychological rubble.

Okay, I may be a little melodramatic! Nonetheless, it's time to look for some solutions to this problem. While riding the bus to work, I got a few ideas, and I wanted to share them with you:

At the association's AGM, always renew your membership for the next year. The AGM is once a year: go to the AGM, renew

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT DAY: MARCH 8, 2002

On March 8, 2002, the University of Alberta's School of Library and Information Studies is holding its annual Professional Development (PD) Day for Alberta's library community, directed towards both graduate students and practicing professionals. Our theme is Technology and Tradition: Working Together in Libraries and Information Centres. Speakers will comprise both MLIS students and information professionals from both the local and national setting. In past years, this one-day miniconference has drawn speakers such as Dr. Roma Harris (Vice-Provost and Registrar, University of Western Ontario) and Roch Carrier (National Librarian).

Professional Development Day invites librarians and information professionals from across Alberta, giving them the opportunity for continuing education and networking with their fellow colleagues. Door prizes, as well as a wine and cheese poster session sponsored by the University of Alberta's School of Library and Information Studies Alumni Association are among the attractions from which attendees can benefit.

Please keep your eyes and ears open for future announcements that will provide further details regarding the time, location, and speakers at PD Day.

"This year's recipient is a model of persistence and vision, for her endeavours have transformed library service in Alberta and attracted attention across North America and beyond."

On Saturday October 6, the University of Alberta Library and Information Studies Alumni Association (LISAA) at its annual reunion breakfast honoured Lucy Pana with the Distinguished Alumni Award. Lucy is the fourth recipient of this award, which was first awarded in 1995. Recipients of this award, like Lucy Pana, are University of Alberta Library School graduates who have made outstanding contributions to the library community.

LISAA President Tracy Stewart presents Lucy Pana with the 2001-02 Distinguished Alumni Award

This year's recipient is a model of persistence and vision, for her endeavours have transformed library service in Alberta and attracted attention across North America and beyond.

Before being appointed to her current position with The Alberta Library, Lucy held several positions with the Government of Alberta. During a period of reduction in departmental budget and staffing, Lucy as Director of the Library Services Branch, Alberta Culture, was steadfast in maintaining library services: her persistence and dedication gained her the support of the library community during a difficult time. Her responsibilities in other positions included administration of library legislation and library grants and regional library system development. She spearheaded the initiatives by the library community by developing the Libraries ASAP strategic plan for library services in Alberta.

In 1997, Lucy was appointed as the first Executive Director of The Alberta Library (TAL); its membership represents most public and academic libraries in the province, as well as some special libraries. Lucy's vision, astute management and powers of diplomacy have been instrumental in overseeing this organization's tremendous growth. Furthermore, she initiated the development of a library network plan, which subsequently led to the establishment of the Alberta Public Library Electronic Network. This network already connects many of Alberta's libraries, and more are being added. Thus, information resources are made available to both urban and rural residents in a cost effective way.

Lucy is currently Chair of Consortia Canada, which provides a leadership role in national licensing initiatives. Lucy's dedication to the profession of librarianship shows in all her accomplishments - past, present, and future.

PROFILE: DENIS LACROIX, LISAA SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT

As the recipient of the 2001-2002 LISAA Scholarship for entering students, I am pleased once again to thank the selection committee and to provide LISAA members with a brief biography. I come from a small francophone town in northeastern Saskatchewan called Zenon Park. This is where my interest in languages, culture, and interdisciplinary knowledge arose. I grew up on a grain and cattle farm, in a modern pioneering family: my mother had just immigrated to Canada from France and my father's family, also from France, had settled into the region in 1913. I was immersed in a setting that fostered an appreciation for the earth and agriculture, along with a deep sense of identity, culture, ancestry, and the necessity of linguistic versatility.

It is this mindset that inspired my multifarious educational choices. I obtained, from the University of Saskatchewan, a B.A. double honours degree in French and Spanish, following which the Department of Languages and Linguistics sent me to the University of Nantes, France, as an English monitor (lecteur). Delighted with my intellectual, cultural, and linguistic experiences, I returned to my alma mater a year later, pursuing a B.Ed. degree with French, Spanish, and English as my teaching specialities. Moved with the desire to learn more about my father's work, I took one year of courses in vocational agriculture. Afterwards, I spent three years teaching both as a substitute and full-time teacher in Zenon Park's French Immersion and Francophone schools. During that time I undertook a translation (Continued on page 8)

BOOKS ABOUND AT SLIS!

The School of Library and Information Studies, University of Alberta is very pleased to announce the recent release of three new books authored by faculty members.

On April 20, 2001, a Book Launch was held for Dr. Toni Samek's Intellectual Freedom and Social Responsibility in American Librarianship, 1967-1974 (McFarland and Company, Inc., ISBN 0-7864-0916-9). This book presents a critical summary of the ferment and political infighting that raged within the American Library Association during a brief but eventful period when advocates of social responsibility pushed for fundamental change in the profession. They challenged fellow professionals to examine the most basic assumptions about the nature of librarianship and the cultural terrain it defends, in particular the checks against intellectual freedom that had arisen unbidden and unnoticed as ALA pursued other, perhaps equally worthy, goals. Dr. Samek is an Assistant Professor in the School of Library and Information Studies with teaching specialization in the areas of reference and information services, intellectual freedom and professional ethics, and practicum.

On November 30, 2001, another Book Launch was held, this time to celebrate the release of two books written by three SLIS faculty members. One book unveiled at the launch was Subject Analysis in Online Catalogs, 2nd ed, by Dr. Hope A. Olson and Dr. John J. Boll (Libraries Unlimited, ISBN 1-56308-800-2). It is based on the premise that subject access in online catalogs is a complex process involving interaction between a number of components that together form a subject access system. These components are the database of the online catalog, the languages used for subject analysis and the policies and principles of their application, the users, and the hardware and software that allow users to interact with the system. All of these components have to work together for successful subject retrieval. Therefore, this book is about subject analysis, online catalogues, and where they meet. Subject Analysis in Online Catalogs is primarily addressed to students who have some background in organizing information and are ready to focus on subject access, and to librarians interested in subject access in online catalogs and the adaptation of traditional methods of analysis to new information technologies. Dr. Olson is an Associate Professor in the School of Library and Information Studies and teaches in the area of cataloguing and classification as well as feminism and globalization and diversity in LIS. Her co-author, John J. Boll is a Professor Emeritus of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, School of Library and Information Studies.

Following the popular and critical success of New Tales for Old: Folktales as Literary Fictions for Young Adults in 1999, Dr. Anna Altmann and Professor Gail de Vos have published a companion text, Tales, Then and Now: More Folktales as Literary Fictions for Young Adults (Libraries Unlimited, ISBN 1-56308-831-2). A resource for librarians, storytellers, folklorists, scholars and educators, this book examines reworkings and critical interpretations of nine classic folktales and ballads, including five by Hans Christian Andersen:. The tales and ballads explored are Beauty and the Beast, Jack and the Beanstalk and Jack the Giantkiller, Tamlin and Thomas the Rhymer, The Little Mermaid, The Wild Swans, The Snow Queen, the Emperor's New Clothes, and the Princess on the Pea. Anna Altmann is an Associate Professor in the School of Library and Information Studies and Gail de Vos is an Adjunct Professor in the School and a professional storyteller of international renown. Dr. Altmann teaches the required introductory course on the foundations of library and information studies as a discipline, and both she and Professor de Vos teach courses in the area of library services and materials for children and youth.

The School is very proud of these diverse and important contributions to the body of knowledge in the library and information studies discipline.

Happy Holidays from your LISAA Executive!

membership, done! Of course, AGMs for all associations notoriously have low attendance, so this may not be suitable for many. One should remember that AGMs almost always have free food, so perhaps this will serve as an incentive.

I use this method for remembering things at work. Half of my co-workers think I'm brilliant; the other half think I have dementia. The function you need is available in Microsoft Outlook[™], but should be available in other e-mail programs too. At some point in the year, generally well in advance of the time for membership renewal, you'll be reminded of a particular association you belong to: you may see an event posting on JEROME-L or a letter. At that time, write an e-mail to yourself saying it's time to renew your membership. Before you send it, click on Options (remember, this is in Outlook[™]). One of the options is, "Do not send message before [you choose date]." Choose the date when you have to write your renewal fee cheque. Now send the message. Six months down the road, you'll get an e-mail that tells you to renew! I recommend putting something like DIARIZE in the subject line because it can be quite alarming to receive an unsolicited e-mail from yourself!

Here's one for those of you with regular access to a number of children. You will need at least one child for each membership you have. Let's use LISAA as an example; the beginning of the year for LISAA is September 1. Tell little Jamie, the kid next door, that Harry Potter's birthday is on September 1. Little Jamie absolutely must come to you on Harry Potter's birthday and remind you of the secret magic store, "LISAA". Your job is to sit down and write a cheque to LISAA so they'll send Harry a gift on Jamie's behalf; Jamie's job is to nag you ceaselessly until you send Harry his present. No kid will forget Harry Potter's birthday!

I hope some of these suggestions are helpful to those of you, who like myself, have the best intentions of renewing memberships on time, but it's just too much for our mental faculties. Fortunately, events are much more fun and easier to remember. I look forward to seeing my fellow Edmonton alumni at the upcoming Partners In Education reception on January 25. Until then, have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Ho! Ho! Ho!

certificate through the Collège universitaire de Saint-Boniface's Internet programs.

A very knowledgeable and inspiring University of Saskatchewan librarian planted the seed of librarianship in me. Although it took many years to spring up, like the bonsai tree, my interdisciplinary roots are well established and I am prepared to serve my new profession well. Again, it is the love of culture, identity, language, and knowledge that inspired me to enter the noble profession of organizing, preserving, and disseminating information.

My interests reside in many aspects of librarianship: reference, cataloguing, collection development, and archives; therefore, as of yet, I have not decided on my specialization. Nevertheless, I wish to become a well rounded librarian prepared for all the profession's challenges. In this spirit, I hope to embark upon a work experience program during the summer of 2002 at a new state-of-the-art municipal library in Troyes, France.
