GC Web Content

Short history, shorter lifespan:

- pre 2000: range of styles, content on agency websites
- 2000: Common Look and Feel (CLF) standard implemented
- 2007: CLF 2.0 released, implemented in 2008
- 2011: CLF 2.0 Part 2, Standard on the Accessibility, Interoperability, and Usability of Web Sites replaced by Standard on Web Accessibility
- 2012-2013: “Web Renewal Action Plan” in TBS DPR.

GC Web Content

- Many anecdotes about lost web content.
- Library and Archives Canada (LAC) web archive: representative sample starting in 2005 and ending in November 2007 (lots of dead links).
- Wayback Machine (Archive.org): some gc.ca sites prior to 2012; “full” crawl in early 2013 due to advocacy efforts of GODORT IDTF (lots of dead links); first choice for journalists and other users.
- How do you know what’s been lost?

Jason Kenney's speech to Islamic Society of North America removed from government (and personal) websites

by Michael Petrou on Thursday, July 18, 2013 11:58am - 109 Comments

VIEW IN CLEAN READING MODE » WHAT IS THIS ?

Liberal Party leader Justin Trudeau has received sharp criticism for speaking last week to the Islamic Society of North America, an organization the secular Muslim Canadian Congress describes as "Canada's leading Islamist group."

As it happens, former citizenship and immigration minister (and current employment and social development minister) Jason Kenney also spoke to the group in November 2008.

Oddly, his speaking notes for the breakfast meeting seem to have been erased from Kenney's website, and from the online archives of Citizenship and Immigration Canada.

GC Web Content Project

- Assessment of changes to Government of Canada web content for three major departments between 2005-2014.
- Analysis of information policies that informed these changes.
- Partners: Government Information Librarian (Amanda Wakaruk); Assistant Professor at the School of Library and Information Studies (Michael McNally); SLIS Graduate Student (Danoosh Davoodi).

GC Web Content Project

Challenges:

- Lack of existing methods that account for the nature of content changes (beyond files sizes and volume).
- ATIP request delays / varying policy and procedure documents (e.g., responses ranged from 3 - 242 pages).

Syria: Situation of bloggers (Internet) in Syria and their treatment by the authorities (2011-2012)
Research Directorate, Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada, Ottawa

1. Government Control of the Internet

According to several sources, the Syrian government controls the Internet network (Le Figaro 15 Sept. 2011; La Montagne 6 Jan. 2013; US 24 May 2012, 14). In 2011, Reporters Without Borders (RSF) stated that two government organizations, the Syrian Information Organization (SIO) and the Syrian Telecommunications Establishment (STE), control the Internet (RSF 11 March 2011). According to the RSF, [RSF English version] "[t]he STE and SIO use Thundercache software to maintain a centralised control over the Web. The programme provides online website monitoring and filtering by spotting key 'banned' words" (ibid.). Moreover, according to France 24, there is only one Internet provider in Syria: the STE, a government-controlled company (France 24 29 Nov. 2012). The RSF indicated that, in 2011, the government blocked more than 240 sites, namely the sites of opposition parties, independent information sites, social network sites, and blogs (RSF 11 Mar. 2011). Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 2011, published by the US Department of State, and Le Monde also reported that sites had been blocked (US 24 May 2012, 14; Le Monde 27 Jan. 2011). Sources also noted that there have been several interruptions in Internet service or "black-outs" in Syria in November 2011 (France 24 29 Nov. 2012; US 24 May 2012, 14) and in November 2012 (AP 29 Nov. 2012; Equal Times 30 Nov. 2012; Le Nouvel Observateur 29 Nov. 2012; Citizen Lab 15 Dec. 2012). According to a study on Internet filtering conducted by the Citizen Lab at the University of Toronto, "[t]he government claimed that it was due to technical problems, but the incident was seen by the international community as a way of blocking reports on the current conflict" (ibid.). Cited in Le Nouvel Observateur, a network expert stated that the government had probably cut all access to the Internet in November 2012 (Le Nouvel Observateur 29 Nov. 2012). To this, the Syrian Department of Information replied: [translation] "Terrorists cut the Internet" (ibid.).

The World Report published by the RSF in 2011 stated the following:

[RSF English version]

The Web is monitored particularly closely, with the cyber-army recruited by the government playing a bigger and bigger role. Pro-Assad propaganda, the spread of false information, the hacking of email and social networking accounts, phishing etc-a veritable information and disinformation war is being waged in Syria. (RSF 1 Sept. 2011)

According to the report, Syria is on the RSF's list of "Internet Enemies" and President Bachar al-Assad is considered to be one of the world's 38 predators of press freedom (ibid.).

2. Bloggers

The International Federation of Journalists (IFJ) indicated that, based on the number of victims in 2012, Syria was at the top of the list of the most dangerous countries for journalists, with 36 journalists and media personnel killed (31 Dec. 2012). According to the RSF, [RSF English version] "[m]any Syrian journalists and bloggers have been arrested and tortured" (RSF 1 Sept. 2011). Amnesty International also indicated that, since the start of the demonstrations supporting the reform, thousands have been detained and tortured, including journalists and bloggers (AI 6 Dec. 2011).

Global Voices Advocacy, a site in Global Voices' global network of bloggers dedicated to protecting freedom of expression online to fighting cyber-censorship, also noted that many bloggers and journalists had been detained in 2011 (29 Oct. 2011). Sources reported that Syrian blogger Razan Ghazzawi was arrested on 4 December 2011 by the Syrian authorities at the border between Syria and Jordan (Le Nouvel Observateur 5 Dec. 2011; Blogueurs sans frontières 5 Dec. 2011; AI 6 Dec. 2011). She was on her way to Amman to attend a workshop on media freedom in the Arab world (ibid.; Le Nouvel Observateur 5 Dec. 2011).

Citing a Syrian activist who was imprisoned twice in Damascus, Global Voices Advocacy wrote that

Research Reports

CRC's output—namely insight and analysis—is often in the form of reports and studies. With this solid technical base, clients are better equipped to make their policy, regulatory and technical decisions.

Full versions of the publications listed below are available in digital format, upon request. Please submit a request for a research report, and include the full title of the document, and we will send you a copy.

- Communications Technologies for Flexible Resources within the Customer Premises
  This report addresses telecommunications considerations in the modernization of the electrical grid in Canada, and it is the result of a partnership between the CRC and CanmetENERGY, Natural Resources Canada (NRCan) (Varennes-Quebec). It was funded by the Clean Energy Fund initiative and coordinated by the Office of Energy Research and Development, NRCan.
- Measurements of In-building Signal Coverage and Building Penetration Loss in Downtown Ottawa at 700, 2500, and 4900 MHz
  In planning for an auction to reallocate the vacated 700 MHz analog television spectrum to mobile communication services, CRC assisted Industry Canada's Spectrum, Information Technologies and Telecommunications sector in assessing the typical frequency dependence of propagation path loss, and consequent signal coverage performance within buildings situated in dense urban environments.
- WiMAX Activity in Canada
  This report examines Canadian Activity in WiMAX, including Canadian product development, service providers, research activities and regulatory activities of interest.

Summary

- Web content losses are difficult to track in context in a way that is comprehensive and meaningful.
- Convoluted or mediated access to and the removal of unique, useful web content of enduring value are at odds with Open Government principles and practices.

Web Content Assessment

Congress of the Humanities and Social Sciences 2015
(Ottawa, May 30-June 5); SLIS Assistant Professor Michael McNally

- A Link is a Promise: Methodological Considerations for Examining the Removal of Redundant, Outdated and Trivial (ROT) Content from Government of Canada Websites (see Canadian Communication Association program schedule)
  - This paper examines methodological approaches for investigating the removal of Redundant, Outdated and Trivial (ROT) content to be removed from Government of Canada websites as part of the Treasury Board of Canada Secretariat's Web Renewal Action Plan. The presentation will examine the strengths and weaknesses of relying on the Internet Archive/Wayback Machine, Access to Information Requests, and longitudinal analysis of GoC database offerings.

- Rotten by Design: Shortened Expiry Dates for Government of Canada Web Content (see Canadian Association for Information Science program schedule)
  - This paper examines the Government of Canada's Web Renewal Initiative and impact on the provision of web based government information. A content analysis of documents received through Access to Information requests reveals the government's limited timelines for providing access to web content.

The post-depository environment

Catherine McGoveran | Government Information Librarian
Michelle Lake | Government Publications Librarian

End of the DSP

- Depository program [in various forms] in existence since 1927
- DSP ended its mandate to produce, print, or warehouse hard copies of publications in March 2014
- The majority of Canadian federal government publications are now distributed online only
- Newly published Federal documents are available electronically at publications.gc.ca

Concordia

Currently…

- Context at Concordia: Library Transformation - smaller collections footprint, increased study space

- Collections Reconfiguration - full review and evaluation of all collections
  - static collections, accessibility
  - digitization projects

- Weeding criteria
  - Quebec collections

Concordia

Weeding Criteria:

- Obsolescence
- Redundancy
- Date-sensitive
- Digitization
- Holdings at neighbouring libraries: McGill, UdeM, BAnQ
- Subject coverage negligible
- Damaged/Brittle materials

New discovery tools:
http://library.concordia.ca/research/internet/government/

uOttawa

Currently…

- Context of uOttawa → nation's capital + EN/FR
- Maintaining collection
- Adding links from the Weekly Acquisitions List

In the coming months…

- Review of print collection
  - Electronic availability
  - Storage
  - Digitization
  - Collaboration

Discussion

What is the state of affairs in Canada?

What are libraries doing in the post-deposit environment?

What do changes in access mean for libraries?

How are libraries partnering / sharing collections?

Here today, where tomorrow? Monitoring and making sense of Government of Canada web content changes in a post-depository environment
