Entry Rules for Bibliographic Database

Please help keep the bibliographical database in good order by following all of these guidelines. You are encouraged to print a copy of this page, for quick reference.

Before entering a reference in the bibliographic database, you must determine, by searching the database, that the reference has not already been entered. Failure to do so could result in multiple entries for the same reference. If your search yields an existing entry for the reference you wish to add, compare all appropriate elements (i.e., author, year of publication, title, place of publication, publisher, edition, volume and issue number, page numbers of chapters and journal articles, etc). Discrepant information may point to an error in the existing entry or the new reference. Investigate all discrepant information and if necessary edit the existing entry. Note that it is permissible for the bibliographic database to contain separate entries for separate editions of a work and that editions may be designated by an edition number or may simply have a different publisher and place of publisher. Works Cited lists in xml documents must contain the bibl key for the edition cited by the author.

1. Please do not enter any punctuation, except exactly as and where specified in the example. Pay particular attention to final punctuation in the author field when there is a single author. If initials are provided, do not enter a period after the last initial. This will result in a transformed bibl entry with two periods – one following the initial and one inserted by the xslt style sheet at the end of the author field.
2. Check that you have not accidentally added extra spaces before or after the text in a field.
3. Author names ideally include a first name, initial, and last name. For Editors and Translators initials for first and second names are sufficient.
4. Text in the Author field should be entered as follows:
 - One author:
Marx, Groucho L
 - More than one author:
Marx, Groucho L. and Marx, Harpo B. (Note that there is no comma following the first author's name)
Marx, Groucho L., Marx, Harpo B., and Marx, Chico (Note the serial comma following the second to last author's name)
5. Text in the Editor field should be entered as follows:
 - One editor:
Charlie M. Chaplin
 - More than one editor:
C.M. Chaplin, G. Marx, and S. Laurel
 - If the bibl is for an edited volume and no chapter is specified, enter the editor(s)' names in the Author field, followed by a period and "ed" or "eds". Do not enter a period after "ed" or "eds"; the xslt style sheet will enter the period.
C.M. Chaplin. ed
 - Text in the Translator field should be entered according to the same rules as text in the Editor field.
Charlie M. Chaplin
6. Titles of Books, Book sections (chapters) or Journal articles should be entered as follows:
 - Title with no subtitles:
Truth flies like an arrow
 - One Title and one subtitle:
Truth flies like an arrow: Fruit flies like a banana
 - One Title and two subtitles:
Groaning with Groucho Marx: Truth flies like an arrow: Fruit flies like a banana

There are no spaces before a colon. Note that all titles are set in sentence case – that is, only the first word (and the first word following a colon) are capitalized. Proper nouns are an exception to this rule and should be capitalized.

Titles of Journals should be entered in title case (e.g., Canadian Journal of Sociology).

Do not enter a period after a title. The xslt style sheet will enter the proper punctuation (no punctuation).

If an apostrophe appears in the title (or elsewhere in the bibl), you must enter as "'", placing a slash before the apostrophe.

7. Text in the Year of Publication field should be entered as follows:

YYYY.

For reprints enter YOP as follows 1896/2001 where the first date is original YOP and second date is the reprint date.
