

Reclaiming Ethics, Decolonizing Libraries

Exploring a New Intersectional
Framework for Allyship and Ethical Practice

We cannot know permanently what is right and what is true and so we must never give in to the temptation to suppress what we don't believe in or agree with or find painful to hear.

Indigenous Allyship

- Paradoxical
- Implicit
- Contentious

The issue of missing harmonization processes for the integration of Indigenous rights in Canadian legislation is reflected precisely in the intersection between allyship and intellectual freedom.

Methods

How do we collectivize individual transformation?

- Holistic framework approach
- Based in personal understandings
- A conversation, not a solution

Human Rights

Key Takeaways

1

It's productive and necessary to challenge the basis of ethics in the LIS field.

2

Without reframing conversations about ethics, intellectual freedom and Indigenous allyship will remain irresolvable.

3

Ask yourself: What does a decolonized ethical framework for LIS practice look like for you?
