Kaleidoscopio

Il Sole - The Sun

I descend the hill in the sunset.

Scarlet flames, not trees, I behold; and the houses below are madly ablaze: each window, a miniature pyre (lively gnome-like glances!) and the roofs are scattered blazing red embers. My footsteps move in the sun and I feel enveloped in an amber eiderdown. The whole world is golden!

Valzer Musette - Waltz Musette

The sun does not shine in the lane but slides above on the roofs and splendidly inflames the tops of the roofs, staining with red color. Slinks on somber gables (gossamer film of gold and scarlet) odd red chimneys project dancing gestures and with envy are yawning in silent jest. The sun does not shine in the lane but slides up high and lights the ash tree at the end of the way.

Casetta Cantoniera - Roadman's Bower

She smiled at me and disappeared in an instant waving a wild salutation. Honey-suckle, petunias, sunflowers; on her little face, her eyebrows like festive vines, has been lowered a long, evanescent, ethereal veil of poplars.

Pulviscolo - Efflorescence

Whirling ballet dancers wearing yellow tutus, dash forward, dash, dash forward delirious with joy, in a close file on the floor of the attic. They dance in slippers that are feather light, light intertwining with ecstatic motion in a round dance beatific; they pause, a golden contrast to the grey stone floor. Birds applaud madly at the small open window, they have arrived for the great festival of April!
