LEGISLATIVE POLICY COMMITTEES

The Legislature policy committees have membership from all parties and do not have cabinet ministers as members. A committee can: review any bill referred to it; review any regulation or prospective regulation falling within its mandate; review annual reports of government departments, agencies, and Crown corporations; investigate any lateness in tabling annual reports in the legislature. It can hold public hearings on any bill or regulation that it is reviewing. It can, on its own initiative or at the request of a minister, inquire into “any matter concerned with the structure, organization, operation, efficiency or service delivery of any sector of public policy within its mandate.” The Legislature can also order a committee to undertake an inquiry, and these inquiries have priority. They are also tasked with review of departmental budget estimates.

Committees can hold public meetings on any matter within their mandate; they can recommend to the assembly a need for legislation on areas within their mandate; they also, although infrequently, hear presentations from interest groups.

Committees generally schedule about 20 minutes for a presentation. Presenters are usually wise to stick to a planned script outlining essential points in no more than half the allotted time. That leaves an opportunity for questions. Oral presentations can be backed up with written briefs. Talking to especially interested MLAs or cabinet ministers before or after an appearance at a policy committee can help make a point or clarify information—but their schedules are crowded. Committee clerks can help with all practical matters.
